Annual January Program Held; Offers Mini-Courses, Workshops

For a third time, Stritch is conducting a January Program as "a break and a bridge between academic semesters." January Program '73 consists of a two-week period (Jan. 8-19) designed to encourage the greatest possible exercise of creative imagination and independent study.

This year's program features 19 mini-courses and 16 mini-workshops, complemented by a series of special all-student assemblies and other activities. Every full-time student is expected to complete one mini-course and one mini-workshop (or an approved independent study project), for the January Program is an integral part of the second semester's work at the college. One credit may be arranged for the mini-course or independent study.

Varied Examples Cited

Mini-courses requested by students range from learning experiences in French to Freud's interpretation of dreams, through primate evolution and music listening, to weaving techniques and the anatomy of revolution. Some students are studying poem writing or Afro-American literature, while others are learning about Kierkegaard's philosophy. Field work experiences are also being provided in child care, home economics, and mental retardation.

In mini-workshops, the subjects cover typing, knitting, photography, sculpture,

Issue Spring Schedule For Graduate Division

To accommodate a growing enrollment, the Graduate Division has scheduled 29 courses for Spring 1973. These offerings are distributed as follows: education—3; psychology—4; reading—11; and special education—11.

Among the new offerings for in-service teachers are courses in "School Law" and "Open Teaching and Learning." For principals, vice principals, and assistant principals, the college is co-sponsoring "Administrators in Reading" with the Milwaukee Public Schools.

Registration dates are Jan. 18-20, and graduate classes begin Jan. 22. The detailed Graduate Division Schedule is available upon request.

jazz improvisation, drama, and psychology —among others.

All-student programs include a lecture on "The Social Impact of the New Embryology," by Dr. Robert Francouer (Jan. 10); a wine-tasting fete (Jan. 16); and a "Medieval Night" (Jan. 18), featuring a banquet in Serra Hall and a Recorder Consort in the Little Theatre.

Many Classes Slated In Continuing Studies

Stritch's adult enrichment program for Spring 1973 will begin the week of January 29 — with 44 separate day-time and evening classes offered in 25 different subjects.

New courses include such offerings as How to Enjoy the Theater, Understanding Contemporary Films, A Look at the American Diet, and a personal improvement program entitled Today's Woman.

Continuing education classes are available in great variety in art, music, conversational French and Italian, Karate, Yoga, adult reading skills, writing and publishing, Bible studies, and Asian religions.

Early registration is invited. For a printed program of information, call 352-5400.

Committee Planned Program

Arrangements for January Program '73 were made by a faculty-student committee, headed by Sr. Coletta Dunn. The group began its planning last spring.

Initial Response Reported For Stritch Annual Fund

Initial responses to the third Stritch Annual Fund, received during December and early January, are encouraging. Through Fri., Jan. 12, over $6,800 were given to the college by 257 donors — in addition to a $10,000 "challenge gift" from Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Kliebhan to spark the 1972-73 campaign.

According to Robert F. Flahive, administrative vice president, "The O.S.F. Sisters, CSC Board members, and long-time friends continue to be the quickest to respond. Although the numbers of donors are lower than needed, the individual amounts are higher than hoped for. Also, we expect increasing support from parents and alumni."

Flahive indicated that a special publication entitled Stritch in the Seventies was prepared for Annual Fund use as well as for the information of government officials, school leaders, mass media personnel, and others. This "Report to Friends" has been distributed widely.

Veterans Increase

The number of veterans of the armed services and dependents of veterans enrolled in the college's Undergraduate and Graduate Divisions continues to grow. This year, over 40 male and female students are receiving their higher education at Stritch under the Wisconsin and Federal Government programs of training benefits, according to Sr. M. Laurene Frederick, financial aids officer.

WISCONSIN TUITION GRANTS

Among the financial aids available to Stritch students is the Wisconsin Tuition Grant Program open to full-time undergraduates who are residents of the state and students in good standing.

The purpose of this program, according to the Higher Educational Aids Board, "is to provide the Wisconsin student with greater freedom of educational choice, thus enabling the student to follow a path of self-development in harmony with his desires and the welfare of society."

Grants are based on the student's financial need as reflected by the "taxable income" of parents — up to $12,000. The schedule of grant amounts is figured on the difference between the tuition at Stritch and the tuition for state residents at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

For 1972-73, the sliding scale of grants to Stritch students ranges from $300 to $720 for the school year.

Coming Art Exhibits

Following the annual Junior Art Program show (Dec. 3-Jan. 27), the Art Department will feature two senior exhibits during February and March. Studio San Damiano will display the works of Elizabeth Moreau (Feb. 4-24) and of Diane and Donna Waldoch (March 4-24).

In collaboration with the public school systems of Milwaukee, West Allis, and Waukesha, the Home Economics Department of CSC presented a pilot program in the exploration of health careers for junior high school students.

Ninety students — 30 from each school system — visited Stritch in November and January to learn about (a) opportunities in the field of dietetics and (b) available two-year and four-year college programs.

Miss Julie Ann Lickteig and Sr. Claudine Heintz hosted the young visitors to the college and participated in the related teaching and counseling activities on campus.

Following its business meeting, the foreign student advisers' group toured the Junior Art Exhibit in San Damiano Studio.

Sr. M. Justine Peter, former academic dean, acted as hostess for the group which represents institutions of higher education in the Milwaukee metropolitan area.

M.A. Degree

In May, 1973, Cardinal Stritch College will award its first Master of Arts degrees in Special Education-Learning Disabilities. The LD program, which is relatively new in the State of Wisconsin, was recommended by the college's Committee on Graduate Study and approved by its Board of Directors two years ago.

The Learning Disabilities program was organized in response to the education profession's increasing concern over broadening the base of training for teachers who work with children having handicaps to learning.

Stritch's program provides expanded graduate offerings in the area of learning disabilities while retaining the base of psychological foundations and research requirements of the M.A. degree programs in Reading and in Teaching the Mentally Retarded that the college has featured over the past sixteen years.

Basic Requirements Told

At Stritch, all M.A. candidates must acquire a minimum of 30 semester hours of graduate credit — distributed according to the specific program being followed — with a grade average of B.

In the LD program, the following special education courses are required; Learning Disabilities I & II, Language Disorders, Educational Diagnosis, and a Practicum in Learning Disabilities. (From 12 to 18 credit hours are needed in the major field.)

To reinforce psychological foundations, students must take the Psychology of Exceptional Children, Behavior Management, and Mental Testing. Other requirements include one course in Educational Statistics and another in Educational Research.

Research Options Available

Students in CSC's Graduate Division may select one of three plans to complete the research requirements for the M.A. degree. Briefly, these options involve: (a) a Thesis or Internship with Paper — 6 credits; (b) a Research Seminar with Paper — 4 credits; or (c) a Field Experience in the individual's area of specialization — 4 credits.

According to Sr. Joanne Marie Kliebhan, chairman of the Special Education Department, the Learning Disabilities program includes observational and practicum experiences within public schools and other community facilities, as well as the Children's Activity and Achievement Center.

The over-all LD program is designed to develop an integrated, conceptual view of human development and learning, assessment and instruction, while at the same time emphasizing the nature and function of research. It stresses specific areas of competency needed by teachers in this specialized field.

Finally, the program qualifies its graduates for certification in Learning Disabilities by the State Department of Public Instruction.

In special education, Stritch also offers Master's programs in (a) Teaching the Mentally Retarded and (b) Religious Education for the Retarded.
